

Photo of the Week

#617: Uh Oh!

In case you're wondering (I was), this image shows a "non-contact voltage tester" (commonly known as a "tic tracer") revealing the presence of voltage in a faucet and then in the water. The surprised safety inspector quickly learned the value of testing shower heads in this particular combat zone, circa 2008.

"Definitely not up to code," he wrote.

Want more?
<< Previous | Next >>